A condition of acceptance onto the UROP is that you agree to assign certain intellectual property that you develop whilst working under UROP to the University of Cambridge, and that you recognise and acknowledge your obligation to hold in confidence proprietary information of a commercial sponsor that is marked as confidential and provided to you by the University of Cambridge to fulfill its obligations to sponsors of research collaborations. However, you have the right to decline access to such confidential information if you so desire and alternative research will be found for you. In consideration of your assigning your rights in intellectual property developed whilst working under the UROP to the University of Cambridge, you will be treated as an inventor / author by the University of Cambridge. As such, any revenue generated by the exploitation of the intellectual property will be appointed to the inventors/authors according to the University of Cambridge's policy.

I hereby agree to assign intellectual property developed whilst I work on this UROP to the University of Cambridge. I also understand and acknowledge my obligation to hold in confidence any proprietary information that is disclosed to me by the University of Cambridge pursuant to the above agreement.
